

Food & Beverage Spaces

Arenas | Consumer | Corporate | Education | Electronics | Engineering | Energy | Oil & Gas | Financial | Government | Healthcare | Insurance | Media | Real Estate | Religion | Retail | Sports | Technology | Transportation & Travel

Table in Photo: Coby Apron in Bar Height
Photo in Circle: Union 2 Tables in Bar Height

Tables Commonly Used

Coby Square in Seated & Bar Heights

Harbor Square Tables in Seated Height
Union 2 Tables in Bar Height

Supreme Square Tables in Seated Height
Union 2 Tables in Bar height

Coby Square and Island tables in seated height

Flexibility is the new watchword in restaurant furnishings have become decidedly eclectic and fun. Restaurants, cafes, bars and private dining establishments have turned to communal tables fitted with a combination of high-top and low-top seating to increase the sociality of the setting.

Patrons, who are immersed in social media, bring digital devices to the table wherever they go, sharing conversations and viewing digital media simultaneously. This flurry of social interactions at the table is driving design decisions for full-service restaurants. It's all about facilitating social engagement.

When planning your commercial dining space make sure to note if you will have specific area set aside for special occasions such as wedding and banquet receptions or private parties and corporate events. Square and Rectangle nesting style tables are a great choice for set up quick for catered events and stored easily when not in use.